BACKGROUND

Falcon Security has been operating as a private security company in Iraq since 2003, providing services to government entities, international organizations, and private sector firms for nearly fifteen years. It is now the largest, entirely Iraqi-owned and operated security company in the country. Falcon Security's head office is located at the Empire Business Complex in the Kurdish capital of Erbil, though it also regularly maintains a Regional Operations Centers in Baghdad to supports its ongoing contracts.

Falcon Security services include mobile and static security, security consulting, threat and political reporting, technical security solutions, demining, Hostile Environment Training (HET), vetting of local staff, procurement, and logistical support.

Falcon Security management is led by highly experienced, retired U.S. Army personnel who have established and continuously maintain superior corporate standards. The company's dedicated team leaders are well-trained and dependable with the knowledge and experience necessary to protect clients and property in all environments. Falcon Security offers services customized to clients' specifications, discretion, and requirements while implementing continuous risk assessments.

Falcon Security continually strives to be the custodian of best practice in the provision of security in Iraq. This is achieved through exacting standards in leadership, recruitment, operational ability, technical expertise, intelligence, and equipment. Falcon Security operations meet the highest standards of the industry. Further, as a locally-owned company, the Falcon Security team offers unrivalled knowledge of the environment, its political and tribal groups, and awareness of security issues.

COMPANY SIZE

Falcon Security currently employs over 350 local national and 50 expatriate personnel in managerial, administrative, logistical, security, and support functions. The company's recruitment program draws from a pool of trained and experienced personnel for frontline security missions, allowing corporate services to increase on demand. Twenty days are required for processing experienced security personnel in order to meet new contracts or surge requirements. During this period, Falcon Security conducts intense training to include weapons requalification, vetting, badging, and orientation as necessary to meet client needs. Falcon Security maintains the logistical and material resources required to support normal intake and short-notice requirements for all types of security missions. In the past, the company has surged to over 800 personnel to meet the needs of contract demands.

Falcon Security additionally maintains a fleet of over 300 soft-skin Toyota Land Cruisers, B6 armored vehicles, and Toyota Hilux pickups, models 2014 or newer. All vehicles are serviced by professional mechanics and armorers on staff to ensure the provision of top-quality machinery.

The control room is responsible for tracking vehicles and clients through an advanced tracking system furthering Falcon Security's company drivers are trained and certified, with extensive local and geographical knowledge

EXPERIENCE

The Falcon Security team boasts extensive experience in security operations throughout Iraq, with particular emphasis on the central and northern territories. The company has taken part in the reconstruction of Iraq since 2003 by providing security services to both the Iraqi and U.S. governments, as well as to international and national corporations, nongovernmental organizations, and local businesses. Falcon Security is continuously engaged in the provision of security services in Baghdad and Erbil.

Staffing

Falcon Security's senior management consists of retired U.S. Army personnel that have established and implement high standards for company performance across the board. Team Leaders possess expertise in high risk transport and have a wide range of skills and certifications. Falcon Security directly employs expatriates in differing capacities, all with military background, from the U.S., European Union nations, South Africa, and Lebanon. Lebanese expatriate personnel have the necessary Arabic language skills that are critical for middle management positions.

Falcon Security recruits local national personnel throughout the country, vetting and training potential hires that have a vested interests in their community and nation's development. These well-trained, local professionals possess an inherent understanding of the regions where Falcon Security operates and are able to complement their training with an intuitive response that is only possible from having been raised in Iraq.

This combination of professional expatriates in management positions along with well-trained local nationals as supervisors and security guards is critical to success. Every security operator has been background checked, skill-tested, trained, upgraded, and oriented in the operating procedures for his specific security task. Further, intelligence briefings and risk assessments are part of the daily awareness portion of morning assignment meetings – adding to the knowledge and alertness of all personnel.

Technical Expertise

Falcon Security trains, equips, and supports its staff both logistically and materially. The company provides intelligence, management, communications, and a variety of transportation modes including armored vehicles and emergency medical support, weapons, ammunition, and both urban and remote site life support.

Life Support

In addition to the services and facilities discussed above, Falcon Security offers the following resources:

- Fully secured villas in Baghdad,
